What is DJHT?

Every three to four years, the German Child and Youth Welfare Congress (DJHT) provides a central meeting place for Germany's youth work / child and youth welfare community. The participants - professionals from all areas of youth work and child and youth welfare – come from projects and initiatives, associations out of the NGO sector, from public bodies at local, regional, national and international levels and the realms of academia and research. Around 30.000 guests and participants are expected to fill the fairground in Düsseldorf in March 2017.

And Europe?

JUGEND für Europa together with its national and European partners will provide at the German Child and Youth Welfare Congress 2017 a European programme which makes the vibrant field of youth work / child and youth welfare accessible and invites for European exchange and debate. We invite up to 500 youth workers and other experts in the field from all over Europe to discover together with us, how youth work in Germany looks today and to discuss relevant challenges in youth work in Europe.
